a church either, for that matter. Now we are blessed with numerous churches and a good sprinkling of bells.

Death of John Davis.

John Davis, an old resident of the Huerfano, died suddenly on the 16th instant. He was taken sick only a few hours before his death. Dr. Thombs of this city, was sent for to attend Mr. Davis, but he arrived too late to be of any service. The disease of which he died was inflamation of the bowels. Mr. Davis was about thirty-five years of age. He was an excellent and successful farmer and stock raiser. At the time of his death he was largely engaged in sheep raising. He was a prompt business man and a very estimable citizen.
