Once-in-a-lifetime honor

Jon Walker

by Jon Walker

The National Medal for Museum and Library Service is our nation's highest honor awarded to libraries and museums. It is annually given by the Institute for Museum and Library Services (IMLS) in recognition of exceptional service and making a difference in the lives of individuals, families, and communities. I am very pleased that the Pueblo City-County Library District has earned this special distinction for 2018!

This year's nominees included libraries and museums of all types from across the country. The IMLS Medal of Service is acknowledgement of the extraordinary accomplishments and contributions of PCCLD programs and services. It is testimony to the tireless efforts of dedicated library employees, volunteers, and advocates. PCCLD was recognized for this achievement at a special ceremony in Washington, D.C., on May 24.

As part of the ceremony and celebration, I was pleased traveled to Washington, D.C., along with Pueblo community member Mandy Brown and members of the PCCLD Board of Trustees to proudly accept the National Medal and share the story of our wonderful community.

PCCLD is now among fewer than 200 institutions to have been awarded the National Medal of Museum and Library Service.

This is a singular accomplishment for PCCLD and for the Pueblo area. It truly is an once-in-a-lifetime occurrence.
