

What is the future of our local libraries?

Jon Walker

by Jon Walker

Our libraries are bustling. They are busy with people learning and engaged with productive entertainment, sharing information, and reading and studying. Pueblo City-County

Libraries are popular and successful. An average day at our libraries includes more than 4,600 individuals visiting our libraries to check out more than 8,000 books and materials, 3,500 plus logging onto library computers and digital resources and more than 900 attending library-sponsored cultural and educational events and classes.

This also is a critical time for our libraries' future. An important question about libraries is upcoming in November. There is an expiring library mill levy that will be on the election ballot in November for the voters to consider renewing. This mill levy generates critical revenue that allows our libraries to operate so well.

Our local libraries have a well-earned reputation for positive contributions to our quality of life. They help kids read, learn to think and stay engaged in rich and positive manners. They provide comfortable and safe gathering places to read, use the Internet, and interact with friends. Our libraries deliver best-sellers, classics, and movies all for free. They supply open access to new technology like e-books, audio books and free downloads. Our libraries offer evermore activities and services for our aging population.

This good work has resulted in resounding accolades for our libraries. Pueblo City-County Libraries recently won Best Library in America, Colorado Library of the Year, and was selected as a Four Star Library. Just last year our local libraries were awarded the National Medal for Library Services, probably the most prestigious honor of all.

There is a challenge now for our libraries. The expiring library mill levy provides important money supporting success. This tax has been in place since 1999 and it is scheduled to end in 2019. It is a modest amount in some ways, costing $4.30 per year for each $100,000 in home value. Homeowners pay this now for the Best Library in America. If this library mill levy is allowed to expire, then our libraries' top top-rated services and programs will be forced to reduce. This will leave fewer safe and positive places and programs for kids, families and seniors for reading, study and learning.

The library governing Board of Trustees is asking voters in November 2019 to re-authorize the expiring library mill levy. This way, without a tax increase, the owner of a $200,000 home, for example, will continue to pay the same $8.60 per year for local libraries. If voters support this, our local libraries high quality programs, services, and activities will be strong into the foreseeable future. Without it, serious reductions will occur in library services and hours, and, branches may shutter.

This is an important time for our libraries. I know people are proud of our libraries and their success, and the November 2019 library ballot question will go a long way in determining their future.

Gems of the New Mexico state archives

Presented by Marcus Flores, senior archivist

Thursday, Aug. 15, 6 p.m. RA, InfoZone-4th floor

Marcus Flores, Senior Archivist at the State Archives of New Mexico will present on the available documents in the New Mexico State Records Center and Archives. The archives house New Mexico's oldest documents (1600s-forward) — land grants, governor's papers, personal collections, WWI documents among others. These sources not only include Hispanic resources but records for all the ethnic groups — French, Scottish, English, Irish, Canadian, etc. — who arrived in New Mexico from the Eastern United States in the 1800s as well as trappers, traders, mountain men and merchants. Refreshments will be provided.

Marcus Flores, raised in Pecos, New Mexico, is currently a Senior Archivist at the State Archives of New Mexico.

Marcus Flores

Since the age of 15, Marcus has researched his family history. Much of the research was conducted at the State Archives of New Mexico. He recently completed a genealogy book about his 4th great-grandfather, José Mariano de Jesús Valdés, who settled in Huerfano County in the 1860s.

He holds a bachelor's degree in history and Spanish from New Mexico Highlands University; a master's degree from the University of New Mexico in Spanish with a concentration in Hispanic Southwest studies and a second master's degree in public history from Arizona State University in Tempe.

Genealogical Society of Hispanic America conference

Friday-Sunday, August 16-18, RA, InfoZone and Ryals Room-4th floor

The theme is Celebrating 30 years of Seeking Our Roots: What have we discovered and how far can we still go. Sessions include beginning genealogy, using family tree software, Native American storytelling, an 1800s murder mystery, music, information on DNA testing and more. New Mexico historian Rob Martinez will present and Estevan Rael-Galvez, New Mexico Historian (2000-2009) will be the keynote speaker.

Go to gshaa.org for information on cost, schedule and opportunities to network and connect with your family history.

Call Bob Craig at (719) 231-8708 for more information.

A life in print

Who was Robert Hoag Rawlings, namesake of Rawlings Library? Get a glimpse into the biography of the longtime owner and publisher of The Pueblo Chieftain newspaper and learn more about his many contributions to Pueblo City-County Library District and the Pueblo community. Now on display on the first floor of Rawlings Library, the exhibit was curated by former manager of Special Collections and Museum Services Maria Tucker and generously funded by the Rawlings Foundation.
