The 2nd floor has reopened!

Grand re-opening celebration
Saturday, April 19 from 2-4 p.m.
Rawlings Library-2nd floor

Many improvements have been made to the second floor of the Rawlings Library, and now it's time to share them with the public!

Exciting things are planned for the grand re-opening celebration including a tour of the newly-remodeled space and a hands-on activity in the new Idea Factory, which is a space that was created to encourage curiosity and facilitate exploration and creation.

Patrons can explore in person two new technologies, both of which won the Best of Show awards at this year's Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas, Oculus Rift virtual reality goggles and Leap Motion Controller (which uses motion instead of a mouse or touchscreen to control a computer screen). A 3-D printing demonstration and access to the Adobe Creative Cloud will also be available.

Enter to win a drawing for your very own Leap Motion Controller! Heavy appetizers and drinks will be served. This celebration is free an open to the public.

Construction workers install glass in the Idea Factory, a space to explore and create.

Reimagining the library

by Jon Walker

Libraries have a reputation for being changeless institutions. But this is not really the case, at least not now. Our library is among many across the country that are reimagining themselves.

Technology is a driving force behind this. E-books, streaming video and more have caused libraries to consider how best to further engage with the community. The mission of our public libraries is to ensure free and open access to information, lifelong learning, instilling the joy of reading and the value of literacy. How to best deliver on these principles in an ever-more-digital world is the question libraries are striving to answer.

This notion is pushing today's public libraries to reconsider how to best meet the needs of their clientele. Many libraries around the nation—including our libraries in Pueblo—are now offering not only books, magazines and newspapers, audiobooks, and films but also are places to use wireless tablets and laptops, 3-D printers and more.

Along with this, libraries are rethinking how they present themselves. This includes more open and comfy seating, technology, and space designed to encourage collaboration as well as solitary work. It includes food and drink. The goal is to create environments to boost people's ability to learn, work together, and create information.

It is this spirit, for instance, that teen centers have become prevalent in our libraries. These are places encouraging teens to “hang out,” “mess around,” and “geek out” (“homago”), including a newer focus on gaming, digital labs and software and equipment to record and create.

The evolution toward this modern library is not new. It began at least as early as the late twentieth century as the Internet became ubiquitous. In the '70s, patrons went to the reference desk, asked a question, and the librarian would help them research and answer using encyclopedias, dictionaries, almanacs, directories, gazetteers, and so on. Today, people turn to librarians to help them sift through the overwhelming amount of information they discover on the Internet. Librarians now are more like navigators.

Despite these changes, our libraries will continue to spotlight books and other printed information. Although there are examples of all-digital libraries—such as the one in San Antonio, Texas, that opened to some fanfare last year—print remains vital in most cases. While the digital movement is dramatically (and forever) impacting public libraries, customers still want print, too. In 2012, for example, 28 percent of adults nationally read an e-book, while 69 percent read a print book. According to the Pew Research Center, still only four percent of readers are “e-book only.” Nevertheless, about 90 percent of public libraries in the United States by 2013 were offering e-books, and a recent survey by the Library Journal shows that circulation of e-books in public libraries nationally continues to increase quickly.

What are we to conclude? The clear answer is that while print remains essential, so now, too, is digital. This means a balance is important. The successful modern public library must represent both. So, we have libraries featuring open areas still with plenty of books and casual seating, but also with high-tech digital services and devices, too.

If we get it right, I am confident the result is a community center of information discovery and exchange. A popular and thriving destination for reading, viewing, listening, creating, and learning.

PechaKucha

The 10th volume of PechaKucha was held Feb. 28 at the Rawlings Library InfoZone. A crowd of nearly 100 was treated to an evening of beverages, hors d'oeuvres and engaging and entertaining presentations. PechaKucha is a presentation style in which 20 slides are shown for 20 seconds each. Presenters were (back row from left): Lionel Trujillo, Carla Hendrickson, Bob Benvenuto, Paul Fanning, Nikki Hart, (front row) Bret Hamilton and John Bueno. The next PechaKucha is May 16.

It's a Seuss-a-bration!

In March, library staff and kids of all ages celebrated the 110th birthday of Dr. Seuss by throwing parties at all library locations.

ABOVE: Children at Rawlings Library enjoyed a storytime session prior to the party. Following the story, Yertle the Turtle, Dr. Seuss-themed snacks and drinks were handed out.

Pueblo West Library held a raffle and gave away books written by Dr. Seuss.

Women's History Month was the theme for the month of March as the Rawlings Library hosted Pueblo's Outstanding Women Awards Ceremony. Pictured above are Pueblo's Outstanding Women Award recipients with the winner of the Pueblo Girl Essay Contest, Kaylee Esger (lower right).

John Brogan, with Home Depot donated the use of two heavy duty flat bed dollies to move items around which have been extremely helpful in the remodel project on the second floor. Dionisio Iron & Metal donated several heavy duty large boxes to the library which were used to store surplus book shelving to be placed in storage.

Independent film

Drama — French with English subtitles
Saturday, April 19 at 7 p.m.
Rawlings, InfoZone-4th floor

Alex lives in a working-class Paris neighborhood and sells drugs for a living to continuously pay off his brother Isaac's debts. When his cousin, who has just returned from completing military service in Israel, tells him he's opening a restaurant in Tel Aviv, Alex thinks that joining him might be the life-changing opportunity he was waiting for. But in order to leave, Alex must quickly find enough money and accomplish his "aliyah" (the term for Jews emigrating to Israel) which involves, among other things, Hebrew lessons and connecting with his Jewish roots. He also has to leave Paris, his former lover Esther, his lifelong friend Mathias, and Jeanne, a woman whom he's just met but has the potential of becoming someone important in his life. Torn between making his aliyah, selling drugs, a complicated love life and a destructive brother, Alex will have to find his own way and make a final decision.

Friends of the Library president's corner

by Mary Simmons Couch

The Friends of the Library attributes all its success to our dedicated volunteers. This month, I recognize all our honored Books Again volunteers for 2013, and I proudly report that we have 29 of them. The Friends board feted these esteemed volunteers at our Volunteer Appreciation luncheon last February.

Our "Platinum volunteers" served at Books Again more than 300 hours in 2013, including Eileen Arnot, Mark Clark, Donna Conley, Jay Johnson, Bea Jones, Marvin Jones, Alan Linder, Mary Linder, Roy Miltner, Ronnie Skull, Jim Stuart and Wanda Toepper.

Our "Gold Volunteers" donated 200-299 hours at Books again in 2013: Bill Arnot, Jim Graham and Lois Pfof.

Our "Silver volunteers" were on duty at Books Again 100-199 hours during 2013: Beth Bryant, Cathie Graeser, Kathy Hamby, Virginia Madrill, Jane Milne, Vernon Nelson, Priscilla Nielsen, Caroline Parsley, Don Pfof, Audry Quick, Edna Shoaf, Sally Torrence and Kathy Zervas.

On behalf of the Friends of the Library board, thanks to you all! Your efforts result in important contributions to our library system, and ultimately our community.

Carol King, Friends' membership chair, proudly reports that we tallied 926 as members of the Friends of the Library on March 1. Thanks to all who have recently joined! And, please remember: Easter is coming soon; a Books Again membership can be the perfect Easter gift. Next on the Friends' calendar is our annual meeting, May 9 at 6:30 pm. It will be "An Evening with Drew Dix," our hometown hero. Please look for more information on page 4.
