the thousands of acres of land under the ditches of the Pueblo-Rocky Ford company, is incorporated for $50,000 and the stock is divided into 5,000 shares, with a par value of $10 a share. The incorporators, who are W. D. Garwood, B. H. Tallmadge and John H. Voorhees, state that it is their purpose to construct and maintain a telephone and telegraph system in Colorado and to conduct a business in that connection, the main line being from Pueblo to the town of Wilson.

The headquarters of the company will be in Pueblo. The directors for the first year, under whose management the affairs of the company will be, are B. H. Tallmadge, Lloyd C. Tallmadge and W. D. Garwood.
