be "crudding right along" but 18 inch hole down to where it is expected oil will be found.

The machinery was taken to the field yesterday and Superintendant Mosher of Wyoming, is expected in Pueblo today, also Mr. Goetz, president of the Columbine Oil Company, and start operations just as it is possible.

Each move made toward actual operations increases the enthusiasm of all those in Pueblo who are anxious to see the well sunk and to hear it is in the county. The city is "run" with oil experts, it is said, and are here quietly looking over the ground for the purpose of protecting their employers, who are large capitalists in the east.
