TWO WOMEN VICTIMS OF DEADLY COAL OIL

DEAD.
MRS. FRANCISCO VIDMAR.
HER NEWDY BORN BABE.
FATALLY INJURED.
MRS. SAVERIO DELTONDO.
SEVERELY BURNED.
JOE MICHLAN.

Literally cooked from head to foot, Mrs. Saverio Deltondo, an Italian woman, lies at St. Mary's hospital at the point of death. The coal oil can is the cause of her sufferings, the frightful intensity of which are expressed by her writhing and groaning. The physicians say that they have little hope of her recovery, and all they could do last night was to endeavor to relieve her agony by the administration of opiates.

The circumstances of Mrs. Deltondo's accident tally almost minutely with that of Mrs. Francisco Vidmar yesterday morning. At 5:45 last evening she started to get her husband's supper at their little home on the hillside in "Mexico," the settlement near the Pueblo smelter. She was late and wanted to hasten the fire, so she got out the kerosene can for that purpose. She started the fire going and then left the can, an ordinary tin affair, upon the top of the stove while she went outside the house.

She was gone several minutes, and suddenly remembered that she had left the can in rather a dangerous place, and returned to remove it. The fire had become pretty hot in the meantime, and when the woman went to lift the can off the stove the bottom fell out. There was a flash of fire, and blazing oil flew all over the woman. She was instantly a moss of flame, her light house dress igniting like tinder. Her eyes were filled with the smoke and flame and she groped blindly about screaming loudly and groaning in agony. She ran out of the house into the roadway and several of the neighbors ran to her assistance. By the use of water and by rolling the flaming form of the woman on the ground the flames were finally extinguished.

Medical assistance was summoned, and it was found that the woman was very badly burned. She was given quieting drugs and was removed to St. Mary's hospital, where all that medical skill can do is being used to save her life.

Mrs. Deltondo has a family consisting of one boy and two girls besides her husband, John Deltondo, who is employed at the steel works. The family has lived here for some years and are quite well known in the local Italian colony.

Mrs. Francisco Vidmar, an Austrian woman died last evening at 7 o'clock at St. Mary's hospital as the result of burns received in a coal oil explosion yesterday. Her babe was prematurely born soon after the accident and lived long enough to be baptized. Opiates made the woman's end easier, but her agony before she was taken to the hospital was something frightful to witness.

Mrs. Vidmar was burned yesterday morning at about 10:30 o'clock at her home, 222 east Mesa avenue, in Bessemer. The house is directly opposite the south entrance to the Eiler smelter grounds, where the woman's husband, Jake Vidmar, is employed. The house is two stories high, of frame, and a low addition to the rear is used as a kitchen and bedroom.

Mrs. Vidmar was engaged in preparing her husband's dinner and as the fire in the kitchen stove had gone out she brought the kerosene can into use to hurry along the blaze. The instant she poured the oil onto the fire there was an explosion and Mrs. Vidmar ran out into Berwind avenue screaming at the top of her voice while about her was a halo of flame.

Blinded by the flame and smoke the unfortunate woman fell under a tree and the red fire rolled upward and over her, completely hiding her from sight while only her moans indicated the awful work of the flames.

Joe Michlan, Dan Berdi and others attracted by the woman's screams and by the sight of the flame and smoke pouring out of the kitchen ran to the woman's assistance and with blankets and water managed to extinguish the flames. Michlan was severely burned about the head and arms in doing so.

The limp and almost lifeless form of the woman was borne into the house and then the fearful work of the flames could be seen. Her flesh from her abdomen to the soles of her feet was roasted and hung in shreds. That death was near at hand there could be no doubt and Rev. Father Cyril Zupan of St. Mary's church was summoned to administer the rites of extreme unction. The poor woman was then taken to St. Mary's hospital where she died at 7 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Vidmar and her husband are well known members of the Austrian colony and have lived here for some years. They are members of the St. Mary's church in the Grove and are highly respected among all who know them. Funeral from the house at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock.

The damage to the house from the fire was slight.

DOES NOT REPRESENT EX-SENATOR WOLCOTT

It was stated in yesterday morning's Chieftain that Mr. McLain, of Chicago, who accompanied the north side water works trustees to the Seven Lakes reservoir site to see what Messrs. Allen and Holm, of Denver, have to offer in the way of water rights, was a representative of Ex-Senator E. O. Wolcott. This is a mistake. Senator Wolcott does not now own the reservoir site referred to, having sold it two years ago to Messrs. McLain and Dunham, who so far as knokn, still own the aforesaid reservoir site and claim to own certain

What S. S. S. Does for Children

Children are constantly exposed to all sorts of diseases. The air they breathe is filled with germs, sewer gas and dust from the filthy streets are inhaled into the lungs and taken into the blood. At the crowded school rooms and other public places they come in contact almost daily with others recovering from or in the first stages of contagious diseases. You can't quarantine against the balance of the world, and the best you can do is to keep their blood in good condition, and thus prevent or at least mitigate the disease. You have
