SEARCH STILL FRUITLESS FOR THE MISSING BODIES

Rev. J. L. Weaver Appeals to Coroner and Justice to Have Present Jury Disbanded ---He Makes a Statement.

Borne along on the waves of a resistless torrent such as overwhelmed the passenger train and nearly 100 of its passengers north of Eden, what is supposed to have been the body of one of the victims was yesterday morning seen floating along in the Arkansas river near Holly, a little town near the Kansas line and more than 150 miles below the scene of the disaster. Word to this effect was received yesterday at the offices of the Pueblo Business Men's association, but before the floating object could be overtaken it had again disappeared, either carried out of sight or buried beneath the sands of the river bed. Word has been sent to towns far down the channel of the river asking the citizens to keep a lookout for any bodies that might be carried such a distance.

The water in both the Fountain and Arkansas rivers was yesterday several feet higher than since the search for bodies begun more than a week ago, and it greatly interfered with the work of the searchers who went out from Pueblo. The appearance of the water indicates that the bed of the streams have been again greatly stirred up by the force of the current, and while this interfers with the search, it is hoped that some of the bodies, believed to have been buried beneath the sands, will be uncovered and brought to the top of the water.

The force of searchers employed by the citizen's relief committee has been greatly reduced, but yesterday there was a large number of volunteers, who engaged in watching the course of the rivers for many miles below Pueblo. While their work did not result in the recovery of any more bodies yesterday, it is believed that none could have come to the top of the stream and been carried by the current through lines of watchers along the banks without having been seen.

No changes were made yesterday in the list of known dead, the latest and most accurate compilations placing the number at ninety-six with eighty-eight recovered and identified. No additional information was received regarding the known or reported missing.

According to the statement of E. W. Palmer, treasurer of the relief committee, the $3,300 collected up to yesterday afternoon and the additional funds that will be collected within the next few days will be sufficient to meet all the expenses made necessary by the work of relief. Since Tuesday morning immediately following the disaster near Eden, the work of searching for the dead has been persistently and systematically pushed. Citizens and business men of Pueblo arose to the occasion and gave of their time and means to such measure as to make the work most effective.

At the office of Coroner A. L. Fugard many relatives and friends of the victims of the disaster continue to call daily seeking to find some trace, and if possible, recover some of the clothing or belongings of the deceased. Yesterday Dr. Mathews, of Denver, was a visitor at Dr. Fugard's office and identified the collection of souvenir spoons that had been in his keeping for several days, as those belonging to Miss Mabel Jenkins. When the spoons were found there was with them a card bearing Dr. Mathews' name. He presented a duplicate card to the coroner and further identified the spoons as the ones he had previously presented to Miss Jenkins.

Letter About Gilbert.

Superintendent R. H. Bowron of the D. & R. G., yesterday received an inquiry from L. I. Gilbert of Anaka, N. D. asking for information regarding H. S. Gilbert, who was reported in a New York paper as missing in the Eden wreck. H. S. Gilbert is a train dispatcher from South Dakota, and was in the chair car at the time of the wreck, but succeeded in extricating himself and was saved.

The writer of the letter feared that the initials of the name might have been written in error, and was of the opinion that the party reported missing was G. H. Gilbert, a brother, who was in Colorado with his wife.

Two Bodies Seen Near Fowler

Special to The Chieftain.

Fowler, Colo., Aug. 17.—At a late hour this afternoon two bodies were seen floating down the river past this city. One was evidently that of a man and the other of a young girl with light hair. The bodies came to the top for only a few moments and then disappeared, but were seen again further down. Darkness came on and the men who endeavored to catch them had to give it up until daylight, when another effort will be made to located them. As these bodies have been in the water over the nine day limit, they will possibly be recovered on account of their continually rising to the surface.

Coroner's Jury Resumes Today

"What passed between Rev. J. L. Weaver and myself yesterday when he visited me to see what could be done in the matter of dismissing the coroner's jury was of no importance and I will make no further statement regarding the same." This was the gist of Justice I. C. McKallip's answer when questioned regarding the matter. Any further comment he refused to make nor would he give any additional information regarding the conference.

This visit was made after Rev. Mr. Weaver was informed that it was Justice McKallip who administered the oath to the coroner's jury. This was subsequent to the call made by Rev. Mr. Weaver on Coroner Fugard asking that the jury be dismissed. To his request Coroner Fugard replied that "the jury had made a careful and thorough investigation of the wreck, its cause and all questions pertaining thereto, and that it should be allowed to render its verdict."

It is the coroner's opinion as well as the opinion of others who have watched closely the investigation that the jury should only be judged by the verdict rendered and not until the final decision is made do they believe that a right judgment can be placed on the work performed.

Regarding his visit to Justice McKallip, Rev. Mr. Weaver last night in substance made the following statement: He said that he had asked Justice McKallip if he had chosen the jury and received the reply that he had not. He then asked the justice if he did not think that under the circumstances the jury ought to be dismissed because he thought public opinion demanded it, and that it was replied that public opinion often took exception to ministers. Rev. Mr. Weaver then stated that if the jury had been chosen as it seemed to be it was not legal and that in answer to
