"Dire restrictions were made by our political opponents of what would happen at the St. Louis convention, but they misjudged the temper of the party and the people. While there had been differences in preceding campaigns, yet at St. Louis there were all harmonized and a common ground was found upon which all could stand and do battle for Democrtic principles. A platform was adopted by a unanimous vote, embracing the issues of the day and presenting to the people a declaration of principles which in the language of the times, is sane, safe and sound.

"With a candidate whose personalty appeals to the good sense and sound judgment of the American people, a platform whose principles are for the greatest good to the greatest number, and a re-united party, earnest for the government, we should succeed and the principles of Democracy again triumph.

"I beg my countrymen, as they value their liberty, to guard with great care the sacred right of local self-government and to watch with a jealous eye the tendency of the times to centralize power in the hands of the few.

"Mr. Chairman, it is an added pleasure to receive this notification at your hands. You have been conservative and courageous as leaders of our party in the house of representatives, a position which few men have filled with the signal ability that you have displayed. It will be my pleasure and duty, at a time not far hence to accept more formally in writing the nomination which you have tendered in such graceful and complimentary terms and to give my views upon some of the important questions now commanding the attention of the country."

Mr. Davis concluded at 3:25. He was applauded throughout. Cries for Senator Daniel was so persistently that the Senator responded briefly only to say that silence was golden and that the St. Louis convention had adopted the gold standard to which he should adhere. The audience and speakers were photographed and dispersed as the band played.

Mr. Davis received many congratulations as he made his way to the hotel.

Needed Piece of String.

"I think the seediest railway line in the world is the one that runs between ——— and ———, out west," said a traveling man, who recently returned from an extended trip. "We were crossing a stretch of prairie land near ———, when the train suddenly stopped, for no apparent reason. After a wait of almost an hour the conductor came sneaking through the train, glancing furtively at the exasperated passengers as he passed. When he came to me he stopped and leaned down.

"Say," he said, in a whisper, "have you got a piece of string? We want to fix the engine."

IMPROVED DINING CAR SERVICE.

The Missouri Pacific railway now offers its patrons a Dining Car service between Pueblo and St. Louis that is unexcelled. Old travelers say that there is none better.

The Tendency in Gardening.

"There is a growing sentiment," says Ward Macleod, writing in the September Delineator on Autumn gardening, "in favor of perennials and of some plan that will furnish permanent results along with pleasant effects. This is a reaction from the fancy for the expensive and labored methods of bedding for many years in vogue." The writer considers this reaction a subject for congratulation, thinking, evidently, of the English garden, with its neatness, peace and thrift, and the almost personal quality of its yearly recurring for gloves, violets and wallflowers; and he adds that under the present system, "while violets and crocuses, pansies, primroses and daffodils make gay the cottage garden and hardy border, and brighten bits of ground and nothing but a blank exists in gardens where, later on, are to be seen the brilliant effects of the bedding scheme."
