county as described in the following special to the Chieftain:

Leadville, Colo., June 21.—Deputy Sheriff Thomas Fahey was shot and fatally wounded at noon today while attempting to arrest Lee and Frank Bohannan, wanted in Pueblo for larceny. Sheriff O'Mahoney had received a letter from the sheriff of Pueblo county that the two young men were wanted there, and he sent Fahey and Harrington to the home of Ed. Bohannan, on the outskirts of the city. When they reached the house, the men they wanted were standing outside. When informed that they were wanted Frank Bohannan asked to be allowed to get his hat and coat and walked inside, followed by the officers. Instead of getting his hat the man grabbed a gun and Harrington grappled with his man. In the meantime Fahey and the other brother were engaged in a deadly struggle when presently the wife of the third brother rushed in and gave Fahey's assailant a revolver. Fahey turned and dropped his weapon which Bohannan picked up, shooting the officer in the back with it. He then held the muzzle at Harrington's head, threatening to kill him unless he released his brother. After disarming the officer the two desperados made for the hills, and have not yet been captured, though a large posse is after them. Officer Fahey leaves a wife and ten children.

A large posse have been searching the hills for the murderers. An immense crowd surrounds the jail and threats of lynching are freely made in case the men are caught. The county commissioners have offered a reword af $250 for the apprehension of the murderers.

The Bohannans are quite well known in Pueblo police circles, though until the Howard robbery they had never been accused of a felony. About two years ago they served time in the county jail for cruelly beating and otherwise mistreating their aged father. More recently they were sentenced to the county jail for stealing a quantity of tools.

Further information secured from Leadville by telephone last night is to the effect that the officers who went to arrest the Bohannans had no warrant and that the men wanted had said they did not propose to be arrested without warrants. At an early hour this morning the murderers were still at large. Feeling continued to be very intense at Leadville, where the men had been since June 1, and if caught they may be violently dealt with. The brother at whose house the killing occurred is a miner.
