...project look so encouraging, was the confidence regarding the new woolen mills.

There were present two of the best known and successful woolen manufacturers in the west to place the plans before the association. Their names are withheld for business reasons by mutual agreement until all is in readiness to begin construction, but they are known everywhere where woolen goods are made. They made a flying trip to Pueblo, arriving quietly last night and leaving before midnight. They came prepared to finally dispose of the matter. The woolen mills is to be capitalized at $120,000 and to give employment to 300 operatives. The capitalization represents the sum to be actually invested in buildings and machinery. The plant is to produce two kinds of woolen goods, blankets and heavy material for trousers. The daily product of the mill, the amount of wool to be consumed and other minor details were given in full, already worked out. The manufacturers said that the matter of market was already solved. They were aware, being justness in the state and adjoining territory and could sell all they made. The raw materials were being bought today by
