SELF WOUNDS FATAL IN CASE OF KOZJAN

Mat Kozjan, who, after attempting to kill his wife last Wednesday, cut his throat with suicidal intent, died at Fairmount hospital at an early hour yesterday morning. His wife was at the bedside at the time of his death, having recovered sufficiently from her wounds to permit her being conveyed to the hospital in a carriage.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from St. Mary's church in the Grove. Mr. Kozjan was a member of the Austrian society of St. Peter and St. Paul, and St. Mary's society, and these bodies will be in attendance at the services.

The tragedy which resulted in Kozjan's death occurred last Wednesday. The husband attacked his wife, who was in the kitchen at the time, and after knocking her down, attempted repeatedly to shoot her, but each time the revolver failed to discharge. Yekpo Kroejovich, who was upstairs in the Kozjan house, heard the commotion and succeeded in taking the revolver from the man. Seeing he had failed in his purpose to end the life of his wife, Kozjan ran into an outhouse and cut his throat.

The deceased was insured to the extent of $600 in the society of St. Mary, and held a policy in St. Paul and St. Peter's society for $800, made payable to Mrs. Kozjan, but just before his death he had the entire $1,400 transferred to his 13-year-old son.

Mrs. Kozjan is said to have had about $1,600 of her own, while the family property at 1220 Eller avenue, valued at $2,500, belongs to her.

Kozjan has made Pueblo his home for the past ten years, and was one of the best-known Austrians in the city, having at one time conducted a store here.
