against the city of Pueblo and city council, restraining the cou from passing a proposed ordinance lative to the Court street paving trict. The restraining orders served yesterday evening on indivi members of the council by the sher office. The petition was filed by C Richardson and other property hold

Arguments on the petition were m yesterday morning before Judge R by F. R. McAlliy for the prope owners and City Attorney Hughes the city. Considerable time was ta up by the attorneys on both s arguing to ascertain whether the tition was valid or not. The princ question was whether the city cou had done all in their power to have proposed ordinance passed from time it had been drafted and the titions had been presented by the r dents of the Court street district. fact was brought out that the petit for the paving of the court street trict had been filed with the city co cil June 21, 1906. Counsel for the pla tiff argued that the proposed ordina was not introduced until a year a the paving petition had been presen to the council. He argued that a y was an unreasonable length of th and that those who cared to withdr their names from the petition had perfect right to do so.

Signed by Executors.

It appears that a large amount of paving frontage had been signed up executors and administrators of estat It was contended by the plaintiff th these were unlawful signers of a tition of the kind in question. The had also signed up for frontage, a counsel for the plaintiff cited to Jud Rizer authorities which stated that was contrary to the statutes for city to make use of public property make the requisite number of feet the successful consideration of such petition.
