LOPEZ & LOPEZ

It is now unquestionably the best musical team now on the vaudeville stage. Back of how they came to go into vaudeville is a story of love.

Senor Lopez comes from one of the best Castillian families in all of Spain. His father is a noted don of great means and power.

The young Spanish nobleman was of a roving disposition. His father had set much store by him. He selected the woman he was to marry and the young man rebelled.

He came to America and then west settling in Wyoming. He had received a splendid musical education and he made his livelihood playing with the most noted bands in this country. He took out naturalization papers and took the oath of allegiance to the good old U. S. A.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he aided in raising the First Wyoming volunteers and went to the Philippines with this regiment. For bravery he was promoted and came back a captain. He was at the fall of Manila.

While at San Francisco he, the night before he sailed for the far east, went into the Alcazar. There through a mutual friend he was introduced to a young Spanish beauty. It was love at first sight.

Before he left they had plighted their troth. "If you still think the same," she said, "when you return, and have distinguished yourself, we will wed."

In the Philippines young Lopez fought like a madman. He made such a reputation for dare devil bravery that he was advanced time and again and publicly commended by General Lawton. He came back in charge of his company and proudly wearing his shoulder straps.

He still thought the same and the girl had waited. They were married. Then they decided to go on the stage as both were musicians of the rarest skill and technique.

Electrical features were introduced. They went to New York and so great was their premier there that they were booked all through continental Europe where they were the sensation of the music halls.

For years they played in every capital of the old world and now they are repeating their success of the east here. Their act is one of the costliest, one of the handsomest, and one of the best that has ever been staged. It is undeniably one of the best musical acts on the entire vaudeville stage and has evoked the greatest praise.
