Composer of "Dixie" Dead

By Associated Press.

Mount Vernon, Ohio, June 28. Dan Emmett, the old time minstrel famous as the composer of "Dixie," died suddenly tonight, aged 86 years.

"Shotting irons, the boys out west call firearms," said Representative Gregg of Texas, "and I never read of a death by this route that I am not reminded of an inscription which can be found on a tombstone in one of the churchyards in the state of Arkansas. It reads:

"'This stone is sakred to the memory of William Hardy, who came to his death by fooling with a Colt's revolver, one of the old kind, brass mounted, and of such is the kingdom of heaven.'"

Representative Johnson of North Carolina, who was a listener, remarked: "Guess the inscription is all right, but its' powerful bad punctuation—fully as bad as that which makes an inscription read awfully funny on a tombstone in a burial ground in my state. I have never seen it, but have been told that it reads:

"'Erected to the memory of Sam Dawson, who was accidentally shot as a mark of affection by his brother.'"

"I told one of my Republican friends about this, and he simply laughed and said that we people of South Carolina had peculiar ways of showing our affection."
