

the Soos had enough to win in that first inning, but they did. If all of the Indians had kept their heads up through the game, the result might have been different.

"It is with a feeling of regret that I am forced to bid the boys good-by tomorrow, and I hope they will do well in the land of the enemy. If they do better than I expect they will on the road—and I wouldn't be surprised if they did, then I think that we will go some when they come back home.

"This thing of being a fan causes a person a whole lot of worry," was the closing remark of Col. Breezewell as he left the water cooler and went out in the moonlight night.

"Have you seen Jo this morning?"
"Jo who?"
"Why, 'JO BLACKBURN' of course."
