Evidence in Case Accumulating Fast

Slowly but surely the police are gathering evidence that it is thought will within a short time lead to the apprehension of the two men who are wanted for the murder of Dr. J. H. Turner and C. E. Bishop. Every suspect throughout the state is being taken in charge by the authorities. Some of the arrested men have little or no difficulty in proving an alibi and are released a few hours after being taken in charge, while, others are held for thorough investigation.

Developments at the police headquarters indicate that the search for the murderers is far reaching, and during yesterday a number of clues were turned up which are considered as promising. But little talking is being done, but it was learned that developments of a startling nature may be looked for at any time. Every theory that has been advanced and every clue at hand is being thoroughly considered with the result that a mass of evidence is at hand which it is believed will lead to the capture of the men wanted.

Olney, the Overton suspect, is being looked for by officers all over the state, and it is thought that his capture is a matter of but a short time. It is thought that he is hiding at either Colorado City or Cripple Creek, and those places are being watched by experienced men. Witnesses have been found whose testimony further completes the chain of circumstantial evidence against the man and it is thought his capture will solve the famous murder mystery.

Chief of Police Shoup has a number of plans under way for apprehending Olney and has also a number of suspects that will be thoroughly examined before they are given their freedom. Detectives working on the case are reticent but intimated late last night that something might be expected within the next 48 hours.

George W. Greenlee, a charcoal burner whose kilns are in the foothills northwest of Pueblo, has reported to the authorities that one of his employes saw two suspicious looking men who answered the description of the murderers, on the morning after the attempted hold-up. Mr. Greenlee's employe was in Pueblo Sunday night, and left after the murders occurred. He obtained a general description of the men before leaving Pueblo. During the early morning hours while driving along the road, he passed two men who eyed him narrowly, but allowed him to pass them without molestation. Though it was early in the morning, the man believes that the two foot travellers were the much wanted men, as they answered in every particular the descriptions which have been given.

A detective who is following the case closely and is in touch with the authorities, though not actively employed in trying to run down the murderers, believes that one of the men, the tallest of the two, has had experience in such jobs before, and that he picked up the smallest, the actual murderer, in Pueblo. The actions of the tallest desperado were cool throughout the affair, but the smallest, and evidently the youngest, was evidently highly excited. It is the belief that the experienced man gave his companion the most dangerous part of the job to do, while he was to attempt to rob the cash register and the proprietor if he were behind the counter. The one who took no part in the shooting, was not especially active in any part of the affair and confined his attention strictly to the business section of the house, while the other tried to line up the guests. When the tallest man saw his companion shoot he made a quick dive for the door, and showed more experience than his excited partner in eluding his pursuers. He simply stepped aside, let the officer go past, then walked down Fourth street and disappeared beside a building in course of construction. Nothing more was seen of him, while his companion went wildly down the street in his endeavor to escape, thus being subjected to the fire of the officer and the possibility of being intercepted.

The detective believes firmly that one of the men will be found to be a notorious criminal when the facts come to light, and that sooner or later he will be caught while doing some other job.

Eastern Methods Are Introduced at Polin's

Polin's adopted the eastern method of showing off their fine suits at their spring opening yesterday, and from the manner in which women stood hour after hour looking at them, as the trim little model with the assistance of the madame slipped in and out of the garments, and then walked slowly around so their style and general make-up could be seen to advantage, the adoption was a grand success.

This firm is one of the first in the city to introduce the eastern fashion of displaying the suits. Before entering the store one was almost compelled to stop and admire the window trim, the south one attracting the attention of every passer-by. The hat on the figure in this window is the most expensive one in the stock and is a "thing of beauty" in feminine headgear, being a Parisian pattern in the "tear-drop" iridescent hats, the material chiffon, and black velvet roses in the back. Another beauty was an irridescent rose hat made on the Gainsborough effect of pearl straw braid, and having a large bunch of English ivy under the brim at the left side.

The millinery department showed a large assortment of chic street hats, and the entire display testified to the good taste of the head of th ment, Miss Seabrooke of N The stock of suits is large, tains every variety of up-to- ments. This department is of Madame McIntyre, a w modiste. The opening was by music, and was continued to give all the opportunity of

Crowds Are Attending Foltz and Hardy Exh

The art parlors of the Foltz-Hardy company are a veritable bower of beauty this week, and the visitor almost imagines himself in fairyland. The occasion for this bewildering maze of beauty in the way of cut flowers, ferns, palms, bric-a-brac and what not, is a special Easter exhibition by the company of water-colors. These paintings are the work of a Colorado artist, Mrs. M. N. Teape of Colorado Springs, and there are gems among the collection.

Many of her subjects are the native flowers of the state, among them being several studies of the columbine. The artist does not confine herself to Colorado flowers by any means, for there are lilies and roses, and asters, all of which have been skillfully handled. Two paintings of the cactus sidered by many as the fin collection, and the more one more the wonder grew" tha so wonderfully realistic wrought by human hands. also exhibited decorated chin of other Colorado artists.

The exhibition will last t and is being largely attend art lovers in the city. Th on exhibit at the parlors the ing "Moonrise" which was a short time ago by the M club for the new Carnegie li to see this picture alone wo worth a visit to the parlo taking into consideration th less others.

Plaster-of-Paris Factory

Florence, Colo., March 19.—(Special)—E. Tupper, of Lawrence, Kas., who has much experience in plaster of paris manufacturing, is on the ground and designing the plans for the plaster of paris factory to be situated on the Arkansas river between Florence and Pueblo. The construction work will soon start, and Mr. Tupper has been secured by the Portland Cement factory to take charge of the work.

For Investment

H. Z. Price, of the draughting office at the steel works, has bought from J. D. Lago the northwest corner of Northern avenue and Routt. The property is considered valuable and Mr. Price bought it for investment. The report was circulated that the Pueblo Title & Trust company had bought the corner and intended to at once have a three-story building erected thereon, but T. H. Gibbs, who closed the deal, says there is no truth in the report.

Foundation Begun

Work was begun yesterday on the foundation of the new Chieftain building being erected adjoining the present building. Work clearing away the old lumber will begin at once.
