Faces of the Prisoners Wear a Blank Look

Question of Identification of Supposed Murderers Is Now the Task.

Will the result of yesterday's investigation strengthen or weaken the belief that Raleigh Davis and Ross Brewer were implicated in the murder of Dr. Turner and C. E. Bishop?

With the utmost secrecy nearly a score of people who witnessed the Lousteau tragedy were shown the two young suspects, but whether any were able to positively identify them as the men who wore the masks on Sunday night two weeks ago is not known. Chief of Police Shoup, the Pueblo detectives and Detective Leyden of Denver conducted the examination, and except the prisoners and the witnesses no other persons were allowed to enter the door of the investigation chamber.

From 9 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon men and women who were in the cafe at the time of the murder filed in and out of the chief's private office, but neither a word nor expression of countenance indicating a decision was passed to the eagerly curious outside.

Neither Chief Shoup nor any of the officers who are on the "inside" would impart the result, if any, of the day's work, but it was learned that neither of the suspects was subjected to a "sweating out," and they were only asked to talk enough for the witnesses to hear their voices.

"We would like to tell you fellows something," said Chief Shoup, smiling half wearily as he put on his coat and hat to leave the office for the day, "but we don't think it quite proper to make our findings public just at this time. We do not mean to be selfish with the public on giving out information in connection with this matter, but there is a right time for everything, and we hardly think it the part of discretion to give out the details in this investigation until it is concluded. A decision is what the people want—whether the prisoners are guilty or not, and that we have not reached. If they are guilty we believe we can prove it. If they had no connection with the affair and can show conclusively to that effect, then it would not be justice to say anything now to cause such an impression to fill the minds of the people.

"Only about one-half of the witnesses who we wish shall see the prisoners have been here today," continued the chief, "and it will no doubt require all of tomorrow to finish this part of the work. Detective John Leyden of the Denver police department will remain until we are through, and will assist in the examination of the suspected men after the witnesses are done viewing them, and as soon as we reach the end of the investigation the public may rest assured that we will tell everything."

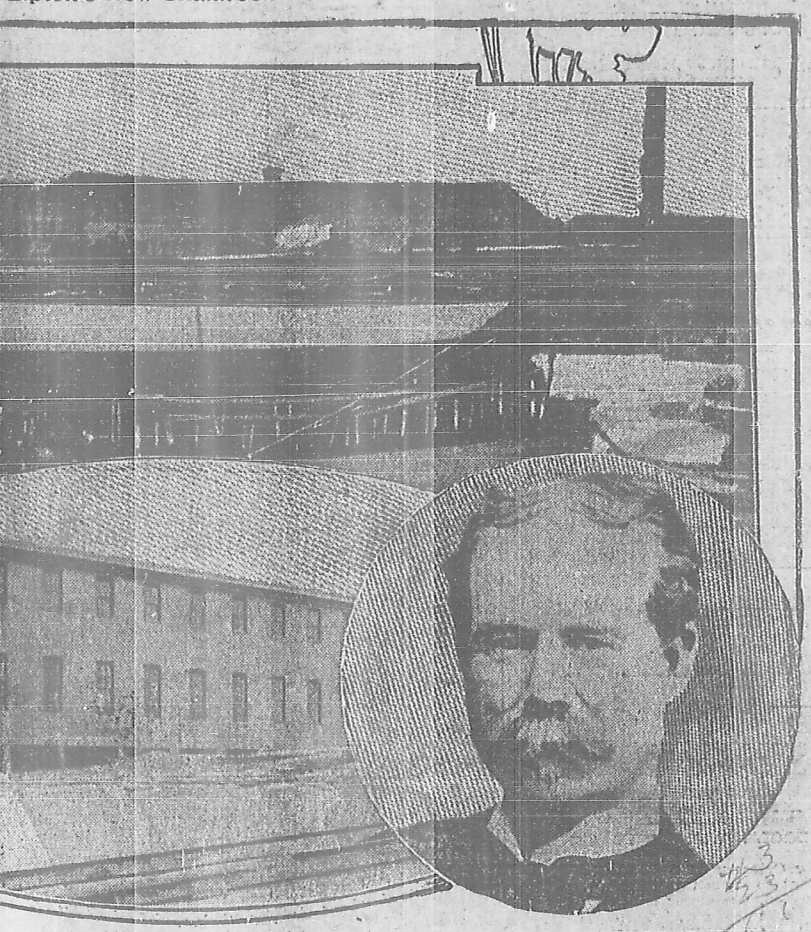

The prisoners were fed at the city jail and then removed to the county jail. They maintained the same blank look that has characterized them since their capture at Boulder Friday noon. Davis seems in the best natured mood and smiles occasionally, but Brewer scarcely changes expression.

Late last night it was rumored that two or three of the witnesses had stated positively that the suspects in every way fill the descriptions of the men at Lousteau's, but the statement, as near as can be learned, is not from an authoritative source. It is known that each person who saw the prisoners yesterday was cautioned, before leaving the chief's office, not to speak his opinion in public.

It is also known that four persons who are considered the most important of the witnesses could not be present yesterday. Today these, together with several others, will be taken before the prisoners. Chief Shoup stated yesterday afternoon that there are a number of people who could possibly throw some light on the matter, but whom the department has not been able to notify, and these, together with others who saw the murderers, either at the time of the tragedy or afterward, are urgently requested to be at the chief's office today. The officers feel that everybody who is in a position to assist in identifying the suspects should cooperate with the department, and be at the office as soon after 9 o'clock a. m. as convenient.

Gustavus Franklin Swift began his business career as a butcher. He leaves a fortune estimated at from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000, made in the course of 45 years. He was born at Sandwich, Mass., in 1839. He opened a small butcher shop in his native town. He removed to Boston when he was less than 30 years old. He remained in Boston until 1875, when he came to Chicago.
