Mother Visits Suspect Son in the County Jail

Mrs. A. Brewer, mother of Ross Brewer, came down from Boulder yesterday afternoon, to see her son who, with Raleigh Davis, is confined in the county jail. Mrs. Brewer is naturally much concerned about the matter, but seems confident in her belief that her son will be able to prove his innocence of any connection whatever with the Lousteau affair for which he is being investigated. Although she is aware that the boy has been identified with acts in the past, yet nothing but a confession from his own lips will make her believe that he would be guilty of such a crime.

No new developments have been made in the murder during the past few days. At least if any progress has been made by the police the same is carefully kept from the public. The public generally are expecting an announcement from the police, either one way or the other, regarding the decision arrived at in regard to Davis and Brewer. Just when this announcement will be made is still a matter of conjecture. It is understood that the man most wanted, and who can probably decide whether or not the young men shall be held for further development, has not yet been available, and it is intimated that other methods may have to be adopted in order to get the desired witness before the suspects.

The opinion seems to be growing in popularity that Brewer and Davis are not the guilty ones, but on the other hand the belief is apparently strong that they probably can throw some light on the identity of the much wanted men. It has always been thought that there were more concerned in the murder of Dr. Turner and C. E. Bishop than those who appeared on the scene at the time. The police further think that if any one of the men who knew of the affair before it transpired can be rounded up it will only require time and pressure to bring out the entire story. Every day that passes the details in the affair and the descriptions of the murderers reach more remote places until now every police department and detective force in the whole United States is on the lookout for such characters as may fill the description.

W. S. Stratton's Past Life Now Uy for Dissection

and a victim of other gross indulgences which rendered it impossible for him to have been a sane man when the will was made.

The introduction of testimony followed immediately the conclusion of the speech of Mr. Watterman. Mr. Dines and Mr. Lloyd were examined only as to their knowledge of the execution of the will and the identification of the same.

Dr. D. H. Rice, who was Mr. Stratton's physician during the last ten years of his life, was then placed on the stand. He declared that the knew Winfield Scott Stratton intimately, and that Mr. Stratton was unquestionably of sound mind and memory when the will was made Dr. Rice also declared that he never read the will or knew its contest until after it was executed. This testimony was brought out in view of the declaration of opposing counsel in their opening statement that they would make a point of the fact that at least one of the witnesses of the will was also one of the executors and beneficiaries.

Ex-Senator Wolcott in cross-examinating Dr. Rice went into detail as to the extent of the acquaintance of the witness with the deaceased, bringing out the testimony that during the last two years at least Dr. Rice saw Mr. Stratton very frequently. The physician testified that Mr. Stratton never had the morphine habit and it would be impossible for him to have had it without the knowledge of the witness. He said that during the ten years he had been attending Mr. Stratton he gave him cocaine, but not to exceed a dozen times, and never prescribed morphine. He said Mr. Stratton used liquor to some extent, though he did not remember of having ever seen him take a drink. He said he did, however, see the patient under the influence of liquor but that occurrence had been rare.

Attorney Hughes here objected that this line of testimony was not cross-examination, making the contention that counsel must restrict himself in his inqury with regard to liquor to finding out whether the testator was under the influence of liquor when the will was made.

Mr. Wolcott contended that not only
