MEN ARRESTED MAY BE THE PUEBLO MURDERERS

Two Suspects Arrested at Boulder are Believed by Police to Be the Men Who Killed Dr. J. H. Turner and C. E. Bishop.

Chief of Police Shoup when asked last night about the two men arrested near Boulder said that they would not be brought to Pueblo until today. When asked what evidence he had against the men he said:

"Unless we had grave evidence incriminating the two men now under arrest, we would not have had them followed and arrested. We have evidence against them which we are not prepared to make public at the present time. It can be said, however, that the two men were in Pueblo at the time of the double murder. They arrived here shortly before that time and left either Monday or Tuesday after the crime was committed."

Boulder, Colo., March 27 (Special.)—While working in the Livingstone mine at Sugar Loaf, nine miles west of Boulder, Raleigh Davis and Ross Brewer were arrested at 2 o'clock this afternoon by Undersheriff Sperry of Boulder on the charge of being implicated in the murder of Dr. J. H. Turner and C. E. Bishop in Pueblo March 15. The men were arrested upon information furnished by Detective Leyden of Denver and Detective Granger of Pueblo, the latter having been in the neighborhood in quest of the men for several days. The prisoners were taken to Denver on the 4:30 train and it is understood will be held there until such time as the authorities at Pueblo shall order them brought to Pueblo.

The general description of the men answers in many particulars to the men who are wanted in Pueblo for murder. Davis, the smaller of the pair, is heavy set, weighing about 155 pounds, is 5 feet 7 inches in height, has sandy hair and a freckled face that is liberally sprinkled with freckles. He has blue grey eyes.

Brewer is 5 feet 9 inches in height, and is of slenderer build than his companion. He has a clear skin and light blue eyes.

According to the local authorities both men have bad reputations and have been sentenced to the State Reform school. Both claim to be between the ages of 20 and 21, and look their ages or they would have probably been sentenced to the penitentiary for the crimes they admitted committing in Boulder last winter.

Neither of the prisoners would talk after being arrested. When questioned as to their whereabouts on the date of the murder they both refused to answer, but did not appear to be in the least disconcerted over their arrest. They both denied having done anything criminal since their release from the reform school. Both acted as though they were accustomed to being taken in charge and behaved like veteran criminals while in charge of the officers.

During last winter the men robbed two saloons in Boulder, according to their own confession in court. The first crime to which they confessed was the burglary of the salon of Frank Jordenelli, where they secured $95. A short time afterward the saloon of Louis Darbarino was robbed of $300. In both cases the police were convinced that old hands had done the job, as all the indications pointed to the fact that the burglars had taken their time and were thoroughly familiar with the work in which they were engaged. The premises were ransacked thoroughly and there was nothing of value left unmolested, although only money was taken. A number of bottles of the finest liquors were tapped and a few of the best brands of cigars were taken.

Davis and Brewer were soon afterward arrested on charge of the crimes and in the trial that followed pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary and were sentenced to the state reformatory. Davis was the first to be released, having been allowed out on parole while recovering from an illness. Later Brewer was paroled on account of good behavior at the institution.

The men had been working at the mine but three days when they were arrested. For some days prior to the time they went to work at the mine they had been seen and recognized on the streets of Boulder. It was stated by one of the officers that the men had acknowledged being in Pueblo on the date of the crime.

Suspects in Denver

Chief of Police H. Armstrong of Denver will hold the Boulder suspects until he receives word from Chief of Police Shoup, which he expects to get at 9 o'clock this morning. Although the authorities do not care to say much about the arrest of the two men there is enough given out to insure the belief that the police were not acting in the dark when the arrests were made.

It is believed that the shorter of the two men being held at Denver is Oleney, the man who was for a time at Overton and who has been badly wanted since the murder. His companion is not known to the local police but is well known to the police of Denver and Boulder.

Chief Armstrong of the Denver police department, gave addition evidence regarding the reputation of the two men in arrest. It appears that beside the Boulder burglaries they were wanted in Denver for attempting to rob a saloon at the corner of Nineteenth and Larimer streets nearly one year ago. When the pair were taken to Denver both were under the impression that they were being taken there to stand trial for the attempted burglary in Denver. There were three men implicated in the Denver affair, a third by the name of Brewer, who is still confined in the state reformatory at Buena Vista. Another significant fact in connection with the arrest of the suspects is that the pair were seen and recognized on the streets of Denver within a few days after the Pueblo tragedy.

Neither of the men in arrest was told by the officers the charge against them. But few questions were put by the Denver police, as it was thought best to allow the Pueblo officers the first chance to investigate the prisoners.

Late last night Chief Armstrong of Denver said that so far as he knew of the case the evidence was exceptionally strong and that he thought the Pueblo police would have but little difficulty in proving their case.

Citizens Excited

The first news of the capture received in the city was the Chieftain telegram that was posted on the bulletin board in front of the office at a few minutes past 5 o'clock. An excited crowd gathered around the short statement and the news spread rapidly throughout the downtown portion of the city. Hundreds of telephone calls were received at the office and excited groups discussed the capture on the various street corners. It was early announced that the men would not be brought to Pueblo last night and the crowds that had planned to wait and see the prisoners were destined to disappointment. Interest was at fever heat from the time the capture was announced and it is safe to assume that every precaution will be taken in handling the two suspects.

It is expected that today's developments will show conclusively whether or not the suspects are the guilty parties. Chief of Police Shoup refused to state last night what he would do in regard to bringing the men to Pueblo, and there is a possibility that some of the witnesses to the tragedy will be taken to Denver to aid in identifying the prisoners. The chief stated, however, that the evidence against the men was strong and intimated that the charge after them had been long and persistent.

Third Suspect

The police yesterday arrested a man who is known as Frank Algon, alias Frank Whitefield, on the belief that he may know something of the murder in Lousteau's cafe.

When Algon first came to Pueblo about three days before the murder he stopped at a rooming house on Victoria near the Royal hotel. On the night of the tragedy, between 8:30 and 9 o'clock, he applied at the Christian home builders dormitory for lodging. The dormitory is located at 312 Victoria avenue and just across the street from his previous stopping place. Algon posed as a dummy and played the role successfully until a day or two ago when he was overheard talking. He then acknowledged that he was misrepresenting his condition, but was doing so in order to enlist sympathy and make it easier to obtain work.

One of the men connected with the dormitory at once became suspicious of Algon and more especially so when the young man showed signs of repentence and expressed a desire to do right. When questioned concerning his past deeds it is said that Algon mentioned an ore stealing case at Victor in which he was interested and stated that there is a man in Pueblo whom he fears will do him injury if he meets him. He stated that the man in question was in the ore deal with him, but that he (Algon) sold the ore and skipped out with the proceeds. Algon confessed to a number of other unsavory events of his past, among them being a term in the reform school.

When asked about the Lousteau affair Algon told the man at the dormitory that he was in a cigar store on Union avenue at the time, and when asked the same question yesterday he said he was at the Y. M. C. A. rooms when the shooting took place. He also said that he did not know the location of Fourth street but when the address of a Fourth street woman was found on his person at the police station he admitted that he was familiar with the street. The fact that he acted the part of a dummy with no apparent cause, and, made so many conflicting statements, excited the suspicions of the men in charge of the dormitory who reported Algon to the police. Algon is being held for further investigation.

Algon is about 5 feet 4 inches tall, light complexion and rather long light hair, and comes as near filling the description of the nervous stranger who asked the Timbers' boy the way to Victoria avenue, on the night of the murder, as any suspect that has as yet been placed on the carpet. The officers have for several days believed that a third man was on guard outside the restaurant, and who threw away his revolver at the corner of Fourth and Court streets when pursued by Officer Slater.

A Bad Break

Vast Volume Rushing Over Rich Sugar Lands.

Greenville, Miss., March 27.—With a tremendous rush the levee four miles south of Greenville gave way at 11 o'clock today and great quantities of water are now pouring through a 400 foot crevasse, rapidly flooding the most fertile land in the great Yazoo delta.

Major Sears, in charge of the government engineer's office here, says it is the worst break ever experienced on the Mississippi side and he states that the whole delta from Greenville to Vicksburg will be flooded. This is the first break reported on the Mississippi side during the present high water.

New Orleans, March 27.—With the water roaring through the break and spreading over a wide area, the ends of the crevasse near Lucy were reported today to be slowly crumbling. Lumber was scarce at the scene but a special train got away before daylight with a large consignment of material, and planters have hurried hands from all directions to the scene. The crevasse occurred in a bend of the river, and that will add to the difficulties of the repair work. Several square miles of territory have already been overflowed.

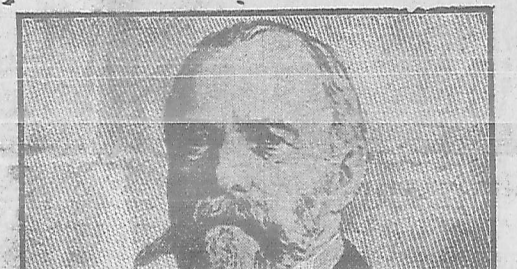

New Orleans, March 27.—Interest in the flood situation here today centered in the break at Hymelia, near Lucy, La., 40 miles above the city and the disastrous crevasse reported south of Greenville. Cotton men felt especially concerned with respect to the latter and the announcement in private messages that one hundred acres of the richest delta land probably would go under water created a feeling of depression. While this break doubtless will cause a fall in the river in the vicinity of Greenville and for a considerable distance south, the water which goes through must inevitably return to the Mississippi through the Yazoo, thus prolonging the period of high water south of that point.

The day's developments at Hymelia gave much encouragement. Under experienced crevasse fighters 700 laborers were put to work early in the forenoon and tonight's advices were that if the work is not interrupted the break will be closed by Sunday. The width of the crevasse is between 150 and 200 feet. A large area is already submerged but if the efforts of the forces at work are successful the water will quickly drain off. The crevasse is in the heart of one of the richest sugar districts of Louisiana. If it should get beyond control, many valuable plantations doubtless will be covered with water in a few days. The belief that the high water levee was cut in order to relieve other sections is strong, and any attempt to repeat the action is likely to be followed by bloodshed if the perpetrators are caught. The river has fallen considerably in the immediate vicinity of Hymelia and the strain has been materially lessened on the levee on the east bank of the river.
