The future of our award-winning libraries

Jon Walker

by Jon Walker

Our community is fortunate to enjoy the amenities of high-achieving public libraries. The library employees in partnership with the citizens of our community have established public library services here that are comparable or better than any in the nation.

There are future opportunities and challenges to ensure Pueblo City-County Library District's ongoing positive contribution to the quality of life in Pueblo and the surrounding area.

There is a tax for local libraries set to expire this year. This modest tax is 36 cents per month or $4.30 per year per every $100,000 of home value. PCCLD's future success is connected to its ability to maintain this with no tax increase in order to continue paying for maintenance, building improvements and operations costs at our seven libraries. Although this is a small expense, it adds up to a lot for our libraries and our community.

Pueblo is a wonderful place to live. Among the reasons for this are our award-winning libraries. Great public libraries contribute much to our wonderful quality of life. Our libraries provide special programs for children and teens to help them read, think and be entertained in a positive and productive way. Our libraries are a gathering place open at no charge to provide wonderful public space dedicated to learning, study, and free Internet service. Our libraries provide the newest, best-selling and classic books and movies available free to the public. Our libraries are the single institution where open access to information is supported and provided for all. Our libraries are for everyone who want to learn, all ages and all socio-economic circumstances. It is no wonder that our libraries are ranked number one in America and serve as a source of community pride.

No decisions have been made but the expiring tax will mean reductions in library services unless it is renewed. I will share more about this in the coming months, and I also want to hear your comments and questions on this important matter.

Sponsors needed!

PCCLD is looking for sponsors for Pecha Kucha Vol. 26! By giving up to $500, hundreds of community members can hear from eight speakers at the next event.

Contact Gloria Madrill at (719) 553-0221 if interested.
